UFUDU Modular Prefab System can be erected on-site

When you need to build robust and functional structures in the most remote settings, Ufudu Zambia has the right solution for you.

Zambia's Ministry of Health recently asked us to provide a modular prefab building that could be constructed on-site in Choma, a remote town in southern Zambia.

The building was to serve as a facility supporting the work of Project ECHO (Extension for Community Healthcare Outcomes), a revolutionary guided-practice model that reduces health disparities in underserved and remote areas. Through innovative telementoring, expert teams lead virtual clinics that provide people in underserved and remote areas with access to specialist medical care that would otherwise not be available.

Ufudu Zambia's modular prefab system was the ideal method for constructing such an important building in the required location, and we completed this 120sqm building in only 12 days, from the day we moved on to the site until the day we handed over.

Erected on a concrete slab and measuring 19m x 7m, this building comprised of walls made from 60mm thick insulated panels, double-glazed sliding windows, a suspended ceiling, lights, steel trussed roof with Chromadek roof sheeting and gutters, Samsung AC units, SPC flooring, and full electrical reticulation.

The great thing about this Ufudu Zambia's modular prefab system is that it can be containerised, sent to site and erected in any location in almost any configuration using prefabricated insulated wall panels. Ideal for units intended for long-term use on-site, as in the example above, the modular panel system is suitable for most types of accommodation, including ablutions, dormitories, kitchens, schools, clinics, houses or modular site offices (including large on-site complexes), and can be customised to suit our clients' requirements.
